Description

Have you ever stopped to wonder why people eat with a fork? Every human around the world needs to eat to survive, but what we eat and the way we eat it couldn't be more different. We will uncover how cooking and food preparation became the cultural revolution that made us human. Let's discover together how food practices vary across the globe and investigate how food is set to change over the next 50 years.

What can I expect to learn?

This is an online taster course designed to give you an experience of the subject you have chosen from within the Social Sciences. This may include Sociology, Criminology or Psychology.

How will I know how well I am doing?

There will be opportunities during the session to discuss your progress with your tutor and fellow learners and receive constructive developmental feedback to support you in achieving the most from the course. You will be encouraged to reflect on what you have learnt and provide us with your feedback on your experience.

What will I need to provide?

The online session will be delivered through one of our video conferencing platforms such as Zoom, Big Blue Button or Microsoft Teams. Your Tutor will contact you and provide the information and support that you will need to join the online session.

You will need to have access to the internet and a device such as a laptop, computer and tablet. Your device should have access to a webcam and microphone so that you can actively participate in the session.

Are there any other costs?

No, however your tutor may recommend further reading, research and/or websites for further independent exploratory learning.

What can I do next?

Your tutor will be pleased to discuss other courses that might assist your progression in this subject.
